

ADMIRAL Bespoke modular boardroom table

The large table's modular structure and stability are made possible by a concealed metal structure to which a veneered layer is fixed. The metal legs are also covered with solid wood. Disassembling the legs allows smooth shipping and an economical, smaller size of the box. The table consists of three parts joined to each other by metal elements folded under the bolt when they are used separately to avoid losing them and prevent them from swinging in vain. The ADMIRAL table complies with the complex system of protocol and etiquette of diplomacy, proving the design brand's ability to bring about a remarkable furniture design according to a specific set of requirements.

The 4,3 m long walnut table consists of three parts: the middle part is 2,3 m long, while the three-legged ones with rounded ends are 1-1 m long. The tables can be connected into a 4,3 m boardroom table or used independently. The space layout can be changed dynamically to meet individual needs thanks to ADMIRAL's modularity: the two semicircular tables can be placed on their straight end next to the wall or turning them into a 2 m oval table by connecting them. As for the 2,3 m long rectangular table, it can be used alone without the small tables by the ends.
